JAMES JOYCE'S ULYSSES

Directed by JOSEPH STRICK

James Joyce's ULYSSES, a sweeping odyssey of human consciousness, has been finally given cinematic form by the experimental director Joseph Strick (THE SAVAGE EYE, THE BALCONY). Screenwriters Strick and Haines have filtered narrative strands from the prismatic novel of one day's experience in Dublin, though they have updated the setting some sixty years.

The essential character of Leopold Bloom (Milo O'Shea) remains one of the most interesting in modern literature. Bloom is an outcast, a passionate man turned away by his wife, the father of a dead son, a semi-success, a Jew in a hostile environment. In the course of the day he crosses the path of Stephen Dedalus (Maurice Evans), a schoolteacher and would-be poet who is having trouble justifying his disbelieving ways to his Jesuitical conscience.

original student play to be produced at USF/Tampa Campus

A final paper for a class in theatre has turned into the playwriting debut of the University of South Florida student Cherie Onkst.

Ms. Onkst wrote "The Gorgon's Head" -- an original play composed in the classic Greek tragic style according to the tenets of Aristotle's "Poetics" -- as her final paper for Professor Arthur Lithgow's Theatre Origins class.

Lithgow thought the play was so "eminently producable" he persuaded theatre chairperson Nancy Cole to schedule it as one of the department's productions. It will be presented March 7-11 in the Centre Studio (TAR 120) at 8 p.m., with Lithgow directing.

The Onkst play recounts, in blank verse, the tale of Perseus, his slaying of the Medusa and his rescue of Andromeda. Ms. Onkst composed music for the requisite Greek chorus, and is chorus director for the production.

The 6-member student cast includes Ron Rachel as the hero, James Wild as Hades, Mike Zeller as the hero's tutor, Suzy Alvarez as Danae, Perseus' mother. There are eight members of the chorus.

Cherie Onkst, a 1975 graduate of Dunedin High School where she was class valedictorian, was a member of the charter group of the Thespian Society there, and a part of the Dunedin High School Chorus.

Director Lithgow, visiting professor in the USF Theatre Department, recently directed the Alice People's production of "A Lion in Winter". An eminent Shakespearean authority who founded the first American Shakespeare Festival at Antioch, Lithgow was artistic director and manager of McCarter Theatre at Princeton for 11 years before coming to USF in 1976.

He observed that the formalized Greek play poses a tremendous challenge to contemporary actors, because it is totally antithetical to modern methods of acting. "Today," says Lithgow, "character is developed internally, out of an introspective search. In classic Greek drama, everything is externalized, including character. Giving power and meaning to this formalized structure is a big job."

Seating is limited in the Centre Studio. General Admission to "The Gorgon's Head" is $3; student admission (other than USF) is $2. Phone reservations for general admission may be made beginning March 1 (974-2323), but all tickets must be picked up at the theatre door on the evening of performance only, beginning at 6 p.m. (There is no box office sale preceding production).

Jay Herring is costume designer for the play. Eldon Mecham is in charge of production, and Paige Delvin Gilley is stage manager. Jeanne Adams is assistant director. George Taylor is technical director.

FREE MARKET AND MINORITIES IS TOPIC OF LECTURE BY ECONOMIST AT USF/TAMPA

"The Free Market and Minorities" will be the topic of Dr. Walter Williams, an outspoken analyst on economic freedom, particularly as it affects racial minorities, at a free public lecture at the University of South Florida March 1.

Dr. Williams will speak at 6 p.m. in the Business Auditorium (NSA101) under sponsorship of the University Lecture Series.

Dr. Williams is an associate professor of economics at Temple University and writes a column for a weekly newspaper serving Philadelphia's black community.

He argues that black Americans can advance, as other ethnic groups have, through the free market. Yet government regulations, in many instances, restrict their entry into the market.

Last year, Dr. Williams prepared a 59-page study for the Joint Economic Committee of the U.S. Congress concerning the minimum wage. He argues that the minimum wage law is injurious to the employment prospects of teenagers, racial minorities and the physically handicapped. He suggested that the best way to help marginal workers is to abolish the federal and state minimum wage laws.

Alconly handi capped. He suggested that the best way to help marginal workers is to abolish the federal and state minimum wage laws.

The initial course, HON301, will begin with Quarter III. This will be an intensive reading seminar, coordinated by a member of the University Honors Program Committee; members of the faculty will each lead a discussion of a selected major book in their respective fields during the course of a weekly class meeting. The class, which will carry four credit hours, is tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, 3 to 6 p.m., and will be limited to fifteen students per section. Additional sections may be arranged if there is sufficient demand.

All students with a GPA of 3.5 or better are automatically eligible. Students with a GPA of 3.0 to 3.5 will be eligible pending submission of two letters of recommendation. Students with a GPA of less than 3.0 may be admitted pending submission of an application, two letters of recommendation, and a personal interview. Interested students are urged to contact Professor Michael Angrosino as soon as possible.

I hope you will bring this information to the attention of your classes and students. I am sure there will be numerous students who can easily qualify for this program.

Persons seeking riders and drivers, to all campuses, day or evening, please consult the Activities Office for listing of willing car pool participants.
