HAPPY HOLIDAYS!
Prof. Garrels Receives Award

DR. ROBERT M. GARRELS, internationally-known geochemist and Chair professor of USF's Department of Marine Science, was awarded the 1985 Florida Scientist of the Year award on October 18 at the Museum of Science and Industry in Tampa.

As Florida Scientist of the Year, Garrels received a solid silver medallion with a certificate and $1,500 in cash.

Garrels' avid study of paleoclimatology—prehistoric climates—gained worldwide respect and brought him international acclaim. He has played a pivotal role in unraveling the physical, chemical and biological nature affecting atmospheric carbon dioxide.

A member of National Academy of Sciences, a select group of 1,275 individuals, the 69-year-old Garrels holds honorary degrees from Harvard, the University of Brussels and the University of Louis Pasteur.

Among the many awards he has received are the Penrose Medal for the Geological Society of America, the Wollaston Medal of Geological Society of London, and the Roebling Medal of Mineralogical Society of America.

He has lectured in Australia, Hawaii, Europe, and in numerous universities across the United States, including Scripps Institute of Oceanography. Garrels has served as advisor to the Department of Energy and National Aeronautic and Space Administration (NASA).
