Q: Do you feel that private employers have the right to test drug use in their personnel?
FW: Not unless they have probable cause that illegal drugs are being used.
Q: Why do you feel this is justified, or not, and interfering with the employee's function as an employee?
JA: The way the situation is now, something needs to be done to protect the student and others outside the campus activities, sports, and our schools. If testing is the only way to take care of it, then I agree to it.
Q: Do you feel marijuana should be lumped in with the so-called harder drugs like heroin and cocaine?
FW: I do not. From what we know, marijuana is not something you can't get away from, and those who would like to use it should be able to, as long as one does not operate a motor vehicle or in any way endanger the lives of others.
JA: Definitely, I feel it is a harmful drug.
Q: Education Secretary William Bennett has proposed massive cuts in federal education funding. Do you feel this would have an unfavorable impact on colleges?
FW: It depends on how those cuts are actually administered and interfered with the employee's function as an employee.
JA: Personally, no. There's some legislation that might seem to be against some kinds of people, but that happens in all administrations.
Q: How do you view Attorney General Edwin Meese's proposal to do away with the Miranda Decision?

JA: I'm against it. It's a right that we as citizens of this great country should have.
Q: Do you feel that the Reagan Administration's campaign against obscenity is a good idea?
FW: I don't think there was any valid reason for it. I think everyone of the freedoms we have under the Bill of Rights has been jeopardized by some of the repressive measures and legislation passed and that they've not solely on the back of President Reagan. For example, denial of bail for the foreign students rounded up in Southern California. I'm wondering what's going on. It was originally sponsored by Senator Ted Kennedy, and later was adopted by President Reagan. So let's not put the whole trip on the Republican ticket.
JA: Personally, no. There's some legislation that might seem to be against some kinds of people, but that happens in all administrations.

USF BAYBORO EYE ON POLITICS
POINT/COUNTERPOINT
by Joe Feuer

Frank Wilkinson, 73, is executive director emeritus for the National Committee Against Repressive Legislation (NCARL). On March 4, he spoke at the Brown Bag Lecture Series as part of a nationwide speaking tour sponsored in part by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

Joseph Alvarez, 23, is a student in the College of Engineering on the USF St. Petersburg Campus. He is a ??Student Government representative?? and is an officer in the St. Petersburg Campus Chapter of College Republicans.

Q: Do you feel that private employers have the right to test for drug use in their personnel?

FW: Not unless they have probable cause that illegal drugs are being used, and that the use of such drugs are interfering with the employee's function as an employee.

JA: The way the situation is now, something needs to be done. The drug problem has plagued businesses, sports, and our schools. If testing is the only way to take care of it, then I agree to it.

Q: Do you feel marijuana should be lumped in with the so-called harder drugs like heroin and cocaine?

FW: I do not. From what we know, marijuana is not something you can't get away from, and those who would like to use it should be able to, as long as one does not operate a motor vehicle or in any way endanger the lives of others.

JA: Definitely, I feel it is a harmful drug.

Q: Education Secretary William Bennett has proposed massive cuts in federal education funding. Do you feel this is justified, or that perhaps military spending should be cut first with education cuts as a last resort?

FW: Military cuts should definitely come first. The budget has been increased by a trillion dollars in the last six years under President Reagan, and most of that has gone into military expenses, at the expense of social services. The best defense of national security is an educated population, and expenditures on military hardware should be curtailed to the absolute minimum.

JA: The education cuts are a serious problem. I can't say I agree with all of them, but certain situations are being taken advantage of. For example, a student aged 24 is now automatically considered an independent student, and some of those are living with their parents, in a nice home, make $5000.00 annually on a part-time job, and still be eligible for federal aid. The cuts will hurt some people, but I think they're the right track, the people who really need it are getting the aid. We must keep up with the current military technology; if we don't someone else will develop it first. I feel SDI for example is a viable defense system.

Q: Do you feel any threat to your personal freedoms due to legislation proposed by the Reagan Administration?

FW: Yes I do. The money I paid into Social Security in my lifetime will always be jeopardized when you have a deficit of the nature we have. The administration may not feel like taking on the senior citizens, for good reason. I think every one of the freedoms we have under the Bill of Rights has been jeopardized by some of the repressive executive orders and legislation that has been passed, and they're not solely on the back of President Reagan. For example, denial of bail for the foreign students rounded up in Southern California for preventive detention was originally sponsored by Senator Ted Kennedy, and later was adopted by President Reagan. So let's not put the whole trip onto the Republicans.

JA: Personally, no. There's some legislation that might seem to be against some kinds of people, but that happens in all administrations.

Q: How do you view Attorney General Edwin Meese's proposal to do away with the Miranda Decision?
FW: Edwin Meese is a walking catastrophe. He is the most unbelievably ignorant Attorney General we've had in my lifetime. My analysis, obtained from talking to leading spokesmen on Constitutional and public law, is that Ed Meese is misinformed, ill-informed, and is using the information he does have to propose changes to undercut the basic protections in the Bill of Rights.

JA: I'm against it. It's a right that we as citizens of this great country should have. Not having to answer questions unless an attorney is present is very, very important.

Q: Do you feel that Meese's national war on pornography is justified, considering that what is obscene in one community may not be considered obscene in another?

FW: I believe that Meese's campaign against so-called pornography has been attacked on the basis of the first amendment. The only true protection of freedom of speech involving something that some people would call obscene is that any consenting adult should be able to see, read, or hear anything that that person should want to. The only restrictions on it should be for the protection of:
1) adults who are not consenting to see such material and;
2) to children. Meese has made a blunderbuss-type attack on the readings of all of us. He's gone after Playboy and magazines of that type, maybe not directly but indirectly. He sends letters to newsstands saying that their distributions of certain magazines may be illegal, which has a chilling effect on the newsstands. Ed Meese is as wrong here as he is on everything else he's touched in the field of law. The community standard would be the most devastating you could possibly conceive of. It has to be a national standard. A few years ago we had an example of how wild obscenity standards can be. The great film One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest was declared obscene in Boise, Idaho. The Canterbury Tales was declared obscene in New Hampshire. So, if you're really going to protect not just writers but publishers, you've got to have a national standard.

JA: There is a lot of pornographic material out there, and it shouldn't be there. Before, a 14 year old wouldn't know half of what a 14 year old knows now. Guidelines have to be set, and pornography has to be limited as much as possible. I do not believe pornography has any value at all as a communicator of sexual knowledge. It's ridiculous to say some of those magazines have any educational value.

Q: Do you feel that Reagan's 50 state mandate applies to his politics or merely to the man himself?

FW: I don't think there was any mandate. I think Reagan has been skillful not at being the great communicator, but instead in denying the American people their right to know. Reagan, since the time he came in, has through executive orders, reversed a trend toward openness in government that came in with Dwight Eisenhower, and continued under Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, and Carter. So Americans have been buying a good actor, but we now know that he doesn't really know what he is doing. He has good scripts written for him, and he reads them pretty well; he's still a good actor. Unfortunately, the American people should not have to judge on the basis of a Hollywood script. The American people should have the truth. We now know from the Iran Scam and the Wall Street Journal disinformation campaign, that he has violated the law, and if the American people had known that in 1984, they would not have voted for him in anywhere near the numbers that they did.

JA: I believe that it applies to both. The man is a very charismatic person; he turns people on. I was in Tampa last October when he came to the USF Sundome, and the University was buzzing. The guy has a charisma that makes people come out and feel good about themselves. But his programs, too, are viable. He has brought inflation way down; the deficit is way up, but that hasn't been him; in years before him there was too much spending and not enough control. Reagan will go down as one of the greatest American Presidents.

Q: Do you feel the current supposedly healthy economy is worth the price that the national debt will exact from America's future?

FW: Last month the cost of living went up .7%, the highest leap in 20 years. Our exports are so far under our imports that the balance of trade is very unhealthy, and the extent to which third world countries are in debt to us, partly due to the fact that our banks urged them to borrow, is also very unhealthy. Reagan is leading an economy that could very well bring a tragic recession.

JA: To me, the National debt is a figure. I don't think it will have anything to do with America's future. It's just a figure that will be controlled. I don't feel that raising or lowering it will have any profound effect.

Q: Do you feel that the Reagan Administration's popularity reveals any basic lack of intelligence, or lack of interest in the issues, on the part of the American people?

FW: Absolutely not. I have complete confidence in the intelligence of the American people. They will always learn and correct error. They will remove the likes of Ronald Reagan, and choose an administration that will service the national needs of the country and show us, in the eyes of the world, to be respected and not feared.

JA: No, the Reagan popularity is due to an enormous amount of people caring and knowing what is right, going out to vote. In the last election, I believe we had one of the largest turnouts in a while. The people like the man and his programs, and they showed it with their Q: How do you feel about the rights of the unborn fetus?

FW: Medical science has the best answer to that. So far as they are able to determine, a human being is not in existence until birth. Women must have total control of their own bodies, freedom of choice to have children when they want children, and to abort children they do not want.

JA: This is an issue that strikes me very, very hard. I am anti-abortion. There is no way anyone should have the right to kill a human being, and once conceived, the fetus is a human being, whether people like to believe it or not.

Q: Who do you believe is the most influential liberal leader today, and does he or she have a chance for political success?

FW: I don't think we know the answer to that. I'm concerned about the lack of principled, viable candidates for the presidency, Republican or Democrat. In the 1988 election, we need a president and a Congress committed to the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, and the values that we will celebrate in the bicentennial this coming September 17.

JA: I would have liked to seen Gov. Mario Cuomo run. I believe he is a good man, and to be honest, if Mr. Cuomo would be running against a Republican whom I didn't think was fit, I would vote Democrat, and I'm a registered Republican. I don't think Gary Hart has enough qualities to win -- unless of course someone like Pat Robertson would get the other nomination. In that case, I would vote Democrat no matter who it was. Probably the most influential liberal leader today is Sen. Ted Kennedy, but I don't think he will run due to personal considerations.

Q: Do you feel dissenters of repressive legislation are being stifled by the current political atmosphere?

FW: No, to the contrary. I've been to 30 states in the last year, and 80% of my audience has been under the age of 25. I find dissent everywhere, and people speaking out. The important thing now is to reach people so they know of the attacks being made on the real national security so they can dissent in time. Once anybody, student or otherwise, learns what Reagan has been up to, they will dissent loudly and effectively. My organization and the ACLU will do what we can to educate the people and lead that dissent, to result in positive action.

JA: No, I believe in the right of any American to voice political dissent, and I don't see it being suppressed.

Q: Do you believe that the rise in public expression of racism (i.e. Forsyth County, Howard Beach) is in any way due to the Meese Justice Department?
FW: I believe it has contributed. Racism is a very deep infection in American society. Black people in this country endured 400 years of slavery, and the remnants are still there in our culture. It will take a long period of affirmative action for us to correct abuses of all minorities. Ed Meese has called upon the Supreme Court to reverse progress made by the Civil Rights Act of the 1960’s, and in doing so he invites the bigotry of Forsyth County and Howard Beach.

JA: No, I don’t think so. Things like racism run in cycles, and we are going through one of those cycles now of troubles on both the national and local levels. It’ll come back every once in a while.

Q: In Florida, textbook censorship in schools has been a major issue. Do you feel a parent has the right to decide what their child reads in a school textbook?

FW: Not in school. The parent’s job is at home, and to help elect Boards of Education that will guarantee the best possible education for their children. Once elected, we should leave it to them. Our textbooks need facts, on the McCarthy era and the un-American activities among others, instead of pressure from the religious right to leave things out, or put in things that have no scientific basis whatsoever.

JA: The religious right does have a lot of power right now. They have a right to use pressure, but I’m against censoring textbooks. They are grasping at straws in many cases; overall, I’m against the moral majority.

Q: During his recent State of the Union Address, President Reagan made no mention of the disease AIDS. How do you respond to this?

FW: It’s a thing that’s bound to happen when a President’s speeches are written for him. There are people around him that do not have concern for the advancement of humankind. AIDS is the most tragic disease in centuries, and at a time when his own health advisors are pointing this out, for Reagan to ignore it in his address is a reflection of the uncaring people who are manipulating him.

JA: I believe it was an oversight.

Australia
A three-week study tour to Australia under the leadership of Harry J. Schaleman, Jr., Associate Professor of Geography at the USF St. Petersburg, departs locally on May 8 and returns on May 29. The tour is open to both students and the public and attempts to give the participants comprehensive exposure to the diversity and complexity of the “Down Under” continent.

The itinerary includes several unique features that distinguish it from an average commercial tour. Professor Schaleman has made arrangements for the group to experience a four-day stay on the Great Barrier Reef Marine Biology Station at Lady Elliot Island. Living in tent facilities, the participants will not only enjoy beach and water activities, but also will hear lectures and presentations by Marine Park authorities. Another unique aspect on the itinerary is a two-day visit to an “Aussie” sheep ranch or “station” where group members will stay in bunkhouses ranch-hand style.

Many of the usual features that highlight any trip to Australia are also part of the study tour. Overnight stops outback in Alice Springs and Ayer’s Rock provide the opportunity to view and climb the continent’s most famous natural landmark as well as a chance to learn about aboriginal life and culture.

The urban experience includes stays in diverse city environments including the “frontier” atmosphere of Adelaide, the British metropolis of Melbourne, the planned capital of Canberra, and the cosmopolitan...

gateway city of Sydney. Tours and visits in and around these centers help to create a balance between rural and urban life.
