WEDNESDAY LECTURE SERIES
The USF St. Pete Lecture Series Committee presents a lecture by Prof. Harry J. Schaleman, Jr., Associate Professor of Geography at USF St. Pete. The presentation is scheduled for Wednesday, February 3, at noon. It is part of the Brown Bag Lunch Lecture Series.

The program is entitled "Trans-Siberian Adventure" and features slides and commentary on Prof. Schaleman's 1979 travel excursion on the Trans-Siberian Express under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institute. The rail journey began near Vladivostok and involved a 6,000 mile trip through the Soviet Far East, across Siberia through the Ural Mountains, and terminated three weeks later in Moscow. This was indeed a memorable trip on the world's longest railroad through endless expanses of magnificent scenery peopled sporadically by a friendly, curious Soviet citizenry.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

MARINE SCIENCE LECTURE
Assistant Professor of Marine Science Daniel Belknap at USF St. Pete will present a talk on age-dating of fossils at 8:00 PM on Tuesday, February 16 in SPA-Auditorium. His presentation is entitled "Dating of Fossils to Understand the Ice Ages" and will be tailored for the non-scientist. A question and answer period will follow. The lecture is free and open to the public.

The Outdoors Club has shifted emphasis from structured meetings to events. As a result, only one official meeting is planned for the near future. This is not, however, a sign of inactivity! Please check the SPE-Lobby or SPA-South for information regarding coming events. Special events include canoeing, camping, hiking, horseback riding, rock-climbing, river rafting, bike trips—all dependent on demand and interest. Stop by the Student Organizations Office (SPE-116) for further information.

During the month of February two photographic exhibitions of interest will be featured at the Museum of Fine Arts. They are Photographs by Arthur Rothstein and the Robert Drapkin Collection of Nineteenth Century Photographs.

The distinguished career of Arthur Rothstein as photojournalist and picture editor is well known. His career began in the mid 1930's when, fresh out of Columbia University, he joined his teacher, Ray Stryker, as photographer and lab technician for the newly developed historic division of the Farm Security Administration. From 1938 until 1940, Rothstein and Walker Evans, Russell Lee, Dorothea Lange, and others participated in one of the most extensive documentary projects ever undertaken in America. In 1943, Rothstein joined the Army and served in the Signal Corp as one of its elite photographers. Following the war, he became photographer and technical director of Look magazine until it folded in 1971. He has since lectured on photojournalism at Columbia University and around the country. He is the author of Photojournalism: Pictures for Magazines and Newspapers, a standard in the field, and is currently picture editor of Parade magazine. Parade, the St. Petersburg Times and Evening Independent are co-sponsors of the exhibition. One of Rothstein's most "classic" pictures, "Dust Storm Cimarron County," is of a farmer and his two sons making their way toward a building in a wasteland of dust, symbolizing the futility of the great depression. Rothstein has said, "It was late in the afternoon. I was about to leave one of the most devastating scenes of the dust bowl tragedy. As I was saying goodbye to one of the few remaining farmers, we found ourselves faced with the onslaught of another terrible dust storm. I ran for my car. The farmer and his two boys ran for the safety of their home. I turned back and squinted through the dense swirling cloud of dust and sand. It was at that decisive moment that I clicked the shutter."

The Robert Drapkin Collection of Nineteenth Century Photographs is an excellent visual tour of the first sixty years of photography. Beginning with a rare calotype of 1843 by William Henry Fox Talbot, the small exhibition includes works by Hill and Adamson, Roger Fenton, Julia Margaret Cameron, Mathew Brady, Alexander Gardner, George Barnard, Edward Muybridge, Carleton Watkins, and others. The photographs range from portraits to landscapes, two unusual pictures of the execution site of the Lincoln conspirators, and a lovely hand tinted photograph of Evelyn Nesbit, one of the principal personalities of the book and film, Raintime.

MILITARY SCIENCE CLUB

A new club has been created at USF St. Pete. The Military Science Club is designed to provide interested students with an insight into the military, its customs, courtesies, and outdoor skills training. During the spring semester, a field training exercise has been planned which will include instruction in land navigation and possibly military tactical movements. Meetings are bi-weekly on Mondays in SPB-120 at 11:00 AM. For further information contact Francis Wheelerhan at 893-9517.

CHESS TOURNAMENT WINNER

Congratulations to SCOTT CASONE—winner of the recent Medieval Week Chess Tournament.

FRIDAY EVENING FILM SERIES

The Friday Evening Film Series will present BEATAZED on February 5. Dudley Moore wrote and starred in this devil-may-care update of the Faust legend. An unhappy short-order cook (Moore) receives seven wishes from Satan (Peter Cook). In short order he becomes a fly, a rock star, an intellectual and a nun. Raul Wall personifies lust in this witty, very funny satire. The film is FREE and open to all area college students, faculty, their families and guests. It begins promptly at 7:30 PM in the Auditorium, Building A. The movie is in color, is 107 minutes and rated PG. It was made in 1968.

There is no film scheduled for Friday, February 12.

On February 19, a campus favorite, MURPHY'S LAW will be shown. The crew of the surgical unit MASH 4077 offsets the gruesome realities of the Korean War by devasting the compound with outrageous practical jokes. Directed by Robert Altman, the film stars Donald Sutherland, Elliott Gould, Sally Kellerman, Robert Duvall and Gary Burghoff. It is in color, is 116 minutes and rated R. It was made in 1970.

ANTHONY QUINN FILM FESTIVAL

USF/St. Pete Film Classics Series is sponsoring an Anthony Quinn Film Festival beginning Sunday, January 24, and continuing every other Sunday through March 7, a "classic" feature starring the versatile actor Anthony Quinn will be shown. VIVA ZAPATA! made in 1952, began the series. Quinn won an Oscar for his superb depiction of Zapata's brother in this historical drama (by John Steinbeck) of the Mexican revolutionary leader, Emiliano Zapata (portrayed by Harlon Brandon).

On Sunday, February 7, Quinn stars with Peter O'Toole in the 1960 drama THE SAVAGE INNOCENTS. Spectacular arctic photography enhances this story of the struggle for survival of an Eskimo family amid the barren wastes.

The Guns of Navarone will be shown February 21st. Quinn co-stars with Gregory Peck and David Niven in a favorite World War II adventure film. Shot on location in the Greek Isles in 1961, this suspenseful movie tells the tale of a group of soldiers and guerrilla fighters who must destroy a heavily guarded German fortress in the Aegean.

The Film Festival ends March 7, with the showing of Zorba the Greek. This 1965 classic, co-starring Irene Papas and Alan Bates, features Quinn as a full-blooded, passionate Greek determined to live his own life, free from the restrictions of an unyielding and unchanging Greek society.

All showings for this Film Festival will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the SPA-Auditorium. Tickets for the series are $3.00, or $1.00 on a single-movie basis, and are available at the Activities Office, or at the door.

USF ENROLLMENT SHOWS LITTLE CHANGE

Enrollment for the spring semester at the University of South Florida
An estimated 25,100 students are enrolled, down slightly from the 25,307 who attended last fall, but above the 25,036 who attended the previous spring.

Reports from each of the regional campuses indicate a total of 4,086 students are taking classes at St. Petersburg, Sarasota and Fort Myers.

The St. Petersburg Campus has a spring enrollment of 2,361 as compared with 2,428 for the same period in 1981 while Sarasota has a total of 1,000 students, down slightly from 1,030.

The Fort Myers Campus reports 725 students, as compared with 711 last fall.

This term’s estimated 25,100 students include 21,600 undergraduates and continuing education students, 288 medical students and 3,212 graduate students.
