Voted by Film Daily "as one of the best pictures of the year," THE GOLD RUSH is still considered by many Chaplin fans as Charlie's best film. Scenes such as the dinner of boot soles and shoe laces exemplify the humor which derives its peculiar strength from the underlying blackness of the situation.

Critic David Robinson said, "Practically the whole repertory of the gags in this film have become legendary; it is one of those rare pictures whose lore has been passed down from generation to generation."

The film was made in 1925 and was directed by Chaplin himself.
