This National Film Critics' Award winner, directed by internationally acclaimed Michaelangelo Antonioni, and produced by Carlo Ponti, is seen by many to be a landmark production. Although first released in 1966, it still retains the power it had when it ushered in the new wave of motion pictures. A provocative film, probing the experience of an individual, confused and indifferent, in a society mockingly gaily, but intellectually shallow. Not only is the film visually stunning, it is also aesthetically stimulating, forcing the viewer to expand his own sensibilities by examining the swinging world-culture of London, a murder and a mind.

OUR NEIGHBORS

THE CROW'S NEST this week would like to spotlight our neighbor, the Marine Research Lab (more formally known as the State of Florida Dept. of Natural Resources, Division of Marine Resources, Bureau of Marine Science & Technology). They are our closest neighbor, sharing with the campus this small finger on Tampa Bay. Although they are not affiliated with the University in any way, they occupy C Building and you may have run into various Marine Research people at our snack bar and lounge area. (They are the ones with the fins and gills.) Or possibly you've witnessed the expertise with which the renowned Mariculture Marauders volleyball team handles itself during a practice game at lunch time in front of C Building in nice weather.

These are all members of the large group who are here at work every day during various types of research pertinent to Florida's marine resources.

Past efforts include such things as basic research on Red tide (first of its kind), oyster nutrition, the value of seagrass beds, the effects on animals present of heated water from the power plant at Crystal River. The lab also researches and recommends guidelines for both commercial and sports fishermen so as to prevent the endangering of any species of water life.

Presently, the Marine Research Lab is conducting an in-depth study, Project Hourglass, of the Gulf of Mexico in an attempt to answer such questions as: what species are there, what do they eat, where do they go, under what conditions do they live?

They also did the mariculture investigation which led to publishing the first public account of demand spawning of pumpan. Other mariculture research includes black sea bass and fresh water shrimp.

Another study of the lab reveals the value of mangroves and introduces the possibility of replanting destroyed shores to prevent beach erosion.

An interesting tid-bit for the sea food lover—rock shrimp, which was formerly discarded by shrimpers because they were too difficult to process, are now the latest delicacy. The taste is proportioned to be a cross between shrimp and lobster and you may order it at the Oyster Bar and/or the snack bar.

There will be a one day softball tournament at Woodlawn park on March 3, 1973. If you are interested in getting more information and/or entering your team, contact Vinny at the Student Activities Office.

The PHOTOGRAPHY COURSE being given by Eric Thoreson on Friday afternoons will meet at 11:00 - 1:00 instead of at 1:00 - 3:00 as originally scheduled. Please bring roll of black and white film to learn to develop.

ONION-COTTAGE CHEESE BATTER BREAD

2 cups chopped fresh onions
3 tablespoons butter
2 cups (1 pound) small curd cottage cheese
2 packages active dry yeast
2/3 cup warm water
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
4 cups unsifted all-purpose flour

Cook onions in butter in skillet, remove from heat. Beat cottage cheese at high speed in blender until smooth, in a cup sprinkle yeast over warm water; add sugar. Let stand 3 minutes while stir until dissolved. Add to cottage cheese plus salt & onions; gradually stir in flour with wooden spoon. Mix hands then blend in the flour completely. Cover with a blanket in a warm place. Let rise about one hour; or until double. Stir down & pour into 2 greased loaves in St. Pete. Bake in pre-heated 375° oven about one hour; or until double. Bake in pre-heated 375° oven about one hour; or until done, turn out from pans, cool.
LIBRARY....

We've moved again. Most of you have discovered that the microfilm cabinets disappeared, and we hope you have noticed the absence of most of the ladders and other construction paraphernalia. The results of all the noise and confusion are beginning to show.

Take a walk down the long hallway from the periodical reading room. The first door on your right is where all the microfilm readers and cabinets are now located. You still have to get your serial numbers from the catalog which is in the reference room directly across the hall.

The next door to your right, at the far end of the hallway and directly across from the main circulation stacks, leads into the room which houses typewriters, a couple of calculators, and the Dennison copying machine. The room adjoining this is a small conference room. Groups wishing to make use of this room must sign up at the reference desk. Please give us your name, your purpose of meeting (such as XYZ Club), and what time you need the room, and it will be reserved for you.

Stacks are on order for the large room at the end of the hallway. Until these arrive this room will be used as another study area.

Let us remind you again, no smoking is permitted in the library except in the periodical reading room.

SPEECH AND HEARING

Have you been accused of mumbling?
Do people say, "huh?" or "I beg your pardon?" frequently when you speak to them?

Does your voice give out if you have to talk loudly for extended periods of time?

Mrs. Bigelow will be on the St. Petersburg campus on Tuesdays to help you find answers to these and other questions about Speech and Hearing. Call the Counseling and Placement office, Ext. 264 or 285, or come by Room 115, Bldg. B and make an appointment.

Mr. Cole:

Words cannot express how grateful we are to all of you for your tremendous help to insure a wonderful Christmas for our foster children.

All of the gifts were so carefully selected to make each child’s "special Christmas wish" come true. There were many smiles and shouts of glee Christmas morning when the children discovered they had been remembered. A special thanks to "Sudsy" for her trip with extra gifts.

We hope you all will continue to share in the children's happiness throughout the year.

Sincerely,
