RECYCLE

The USF St. Petersburg Student Government in Action

By Marty Tschiderer
Crow's Nest Editor

Cynthia Bishop and Patricia Hines were recently selected as recipients of the Student Government Book Scholarship Award.

"There were several good candidates to choose from," said Carol Stith, SG treasurer and chairperson of the selection committee. "But we felt like these were the two best candidates."

Bishop and Hines will each receive $150 to help defray college expenses.

Bishop, an elementary education major, has worked as a volunteer for a variety of university and community events including the Special Olympics, a beach cleanup and the USF's Suncoast Young Authors/Writers Conference.

"Cynthia's community involvement and leadership is a good reflection of the type of students we have at USF," Stith said.

"In addition to her community service, she was also able to maintain a high grade-point average."

Hines, a secondary education major, is president of the USF chapter of the Association of Black Students and is also a member of Circle K International and the Student Business Association. She has served as a Pinellas County volunteer, tutoring at Enoch Davis Community Center and at Morgan Fitzgerald Middle School.

"Patricia is very involved on campus, but has not let that interfere with serving the community or her class work," Stith said.

The SG Book Scholarship is offered twice a year, and all USF St. Petersburg students are encouraged to apply. For further information, please contact the Financial Aid Office in DAV-115.

Helen Champlain, from the City of St. Petersburg Waste Management Department, gave a presentation to the Bayboro Geographic Society (BGS) on Nov. 17. Champlain, a graduate of USF St. Petersburg, spoke on recycling and its impact on the environment. She noted that “nothing is recycled until it is reused.” She also stated that every ton of recycled newspaper saves 17 trees and each ton of recycled glass saves 9 gallons of fuel. BGS members asked Champlain many practical questions, according to club president Jacqueline Donnelly. She said Champlain also reminded everyone that “recycling is news—but not new;” during World War II, it was called “Saving for the War” and people saved gum wrappers, rubber bands, old cars, and newspapers. Champlain’s program, co-sponsored by the USF St. Petersburg Lecture Series, was open to the public.

Nautilus News

By Lenia Webb
Fitness Center Assistant

Note: The Fitness Center staff will describe the Center’s various Nautilus machines in a continuing series.

Lower back ailments affect at least 80 percent of the American population. Lack of strength, or inadequate or incorrect activity is the cause or result of strains. The Lower Back machine strengthens the lower back without dangerous vertical loading. The resistance on the movement is always perpendicular to your spinal column as it moves through its entire range of motion, eliminating compression forces on the spine.

The Lower Back machine, if used in conjunction with the Abdominal and Rotary Torso machines, can help build a strong girdle of muscles around the spine.

If the key muscle groups that support the spinal column are strengthened, most major and minor strains can be avoided. Increased muscular strength, stronger ligaments, tendons, connective tissue and stronger bones all protect against injury.

plays almost always suggest a conscious exploration of gender," said USF St. Petersburg English professor Harriet Deer, in a lecture presented as part of the campus' Lyceum Lecture Series. "He lived at a time when gender was a political problem. England was ruled by a woman who acted as a masculine king and sometimes referred to herself as king, but who, as a feminine queen, was constantly pressured to become wife and mother."

In her lecture entitled "The Triumph of the Shew," Deer focused on the portrayal of women in Shakespeare's Taming of The Shrew. She discussed the tendency of Shakespeare to portray women characters as both strong and adept at creating individuality and independence in a society that was "dedicated to pigeonholing them in stereotyped categories."

Many have accused Shakespeare of being an anti-feminist because of his lax and humorous approach to the subject of spouse abuse. In the Taming of the Shrew, starvation, humiliation and degradation of the character Kate are commonplace and often carry humorous overtones.

"The Taming of the Shrew does, indeed, use spouse abuse as a major source of action and humor," Deer said. "But it does not encourage such behavior; rather it reveals how destructive and widespread its hold is on society."

Over 75 people were in attendance for the lecture, which opened with the presentation of specially-made bookends to Deer in honor of her upcoming retirement in December.

Retirement gala surprises Deer

By Brian Neil and Sudsy Tschiderer
Crow's Nest Staff

English alumni, students, faculty and staff honored professor Harriet Deer on Nov. 18 at a surprise retirement reception.

Deer, who will be retiring from teaching in December, is a founding faculty member of the St. Petersburg campus. She joined the St. Petersburg campus community in 1968, when the campus began offering upper-level classes.

A short informal program included comments by colleagues, former and current students. Jim Schnur represented Student Government and read a proclamation declaring Wednesday, Dec. 9 as "Professor Harriet Deer Day." (Please see back page).

Deer taught on the Tampa campus from 1966-68.

She is married to professor Irving Deer, who teaches English on the Tampa campus. On several occasions, the couple have "team-taught" a number of upper-level courses.

Deer's retirement plans are simple: "Write, travel and swim."

She will also be working on an extensive home library that will take up 700 square feet of space.

Her charismatic manner of teaching and her high level of expertise will be sorely missed by her students and colleagues.
