A grab bag of romp, burlesque and sheer entertainment suitable for the entire family is in store when
"Master Pierre Pathelin" is presented by the University of South Florida Theatre Department. The medieval farce will be staged at noon, Tuesday Feb. 27, on the grass, A-B Building!

The translation of this 15th century French farce has been given everything by director James R. Spillane. He has added to the origi­ inal story the idea of having the play performed as it might have been done in medieval times—by a rough-and-ready acting troupe.

For some two years I have been working with Garry Davis and World Government. We have issued a World Passport, and this is only the beginning. The British government, in the form of verbal encounters, has suggested that our World Passport is a joke. We agree. All passports are a joke! But our World Passport works: Based on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (get a copy right away from your nearest United Nations Information Center), our World Passport is mandated by Article 13, Section 12, which states that all humans have the right to travel to explore all this world of ours. It doesn't say you have to have a national passport. This has been signed by all UN member states.

True story: A friend went to the Egyptian Embassy in Paris to get a visa in his World Passport. This visa normally costs some 30 francs, but he was pleasantly informed that there would be no charge for World Citizens...

If you want to become a world citizen, write us at World Service Authority, 4002 Basle, Switzerland, and an application form will be posted to you. Return the form, properly filled in, with three passport photos, and $2.50 francs, etc. (take your choice), to cover our costs and postage, and we'll send you a World Passport. Just think—when anyone asks you where you are from, you now will be able to answer Earth. "I am an Earthling!"

The troupe (an all-student cast) will enter the staging area pulling a highly decorated cart, inspired by medieval and Gypsy wagons. Its panels will then be converted in view of the audience into parts of the setting for "Master Pierre Pathelin."

Dancing, singing and pantomime sequences by the troupe will precede the actual performance of the play. According to director Spillane, these playful actions will help establish the cast's rapport with the audience, as well as the spiritedness of the production and the nature of the individual characters.

Period costumes for the production will include initial, drab and coarse outfits worn by the purported acting troupe. A costume change into bright, colorful and exotic clothing will then take place in front of the audience when the actors assume the role of the characters in "Master Pierre Pathelin."

Live music on medieval instruments—including recorders and tabors—will be an additional feature of the production.
