Retiring USFSP librarian Gerald Notaro granted emeritus status

Gerald Notaro, retiring faculty member of the Nelson Poynter Memorial Library of USF St. Petersburg, has been granted emeritus status in honor of his 26 years of distinguished service.

The honor was bestowed by the USFSP Campus Board Sept. 19. Emeritus status is reserved for those retiring faculty whose impact on the University was and likely will continue to be of extraordinary significance. It grants certain privileges, including access to office space, campus computing and participation in academic processions.

Carol Hixson, dean of the Poynter Library, said Notaro provided “innovation, a strong service ethic, and wide recognition to the Poynter Library.”

“Mr. Notaro is one of the best librarians and professional colleagues with whom I have worked in my nearly three decades as a librarian at some of the country’s premiere academic institutions,” Dean Hixson wrote in her nomination of Norato for emeritus status. “He was respected and loved across the institution because he gave so much of himself and because he was so experience, calm and wise. He inspired us all.”
