DMG School Project provides educational opportunities to both artists and community while contributing to the development of glass as a creative medium in both St. Petersburg and the international glass community.

Designed by Duncan McClellan, the DMG School Project’s unique “Mobile Glass Lab” has been used for educational outreach with organizations and at events such as the Coalition for the Homeless, Academy Prep, Craft Art, and First Night in St Petersburg.

Children and adults alike enjoy and benefit from the ability to create unique sand etched objects in many settings. One student mentioned that, because of the heavy use of technology in learning “We don’t get to create anything with our hands anymore”, and was excited about the experience of realizing intent through creating art. We believe it is vitally important to provide hands on creative opportunities to the schools, children and adults who, due to financial constraints, cannot travel to our location.
