For movies are generally repetitious, poorly done, and thematically unstimulating. Patter, however, is much more than a film on the "goodness or badness" of human conflict. It is the portrait of a man who became a military and historical legend. Technically this movie is not unique or spectacular, George C. Scott gives an incomparable performance, for you—the audience can not remain indifferent to the man and his effect on persons and events.

The film has returned to the city and is now showing at the Garden Theatre. If you have not seen it already, do not miss this opportunity to see Patter.

CIRCUS

It is spelled the same, pronounced the same, and still generates the same anticipation and excitement. Yet, the circus has now transcended into the category of extravaganzas. Each person must make his own judgement on whether this is for the best or not but the obvious transition is evident to all. Held performers still carry the "three rings" along with their trained tigers, elephants, bears, and other animal attractions. To a background of musicful drumbeats, circus artists attempt feats of agility on wires, ladders and such. These circus events are interspersed between choreographic parades around the arena—complete with circus dancing girls.

Those parades contain lavish costumes for both humans and animals almost to the point of excess. They occur so often during the program with the only difference being a change of costume that the audience is easily bored. The essence of circus still remains with the clowns who control crowd laughter with continual acrobatics and vaudeville antics.
