Six Historically Black Colleges Aiming To Improve African-Americans Health

As community activists, historically black colleges and universities have helped open many doors to educational and economic opportunities for African Americans. Many of these leading black institutions are also opening doors to good health by leading important research on health problems that affect African-Americans.

From children’s health to mental illness, all the topics are being studied on historically black campuses. For example, Care Financing Administration (HCCA) HBCU Grant Program to address the health care needs of the African-American community. The purpose of this program is to utilize the talent available on HBCU campuses to address health issues of concern to the African-American community. Grandma's Hands

She would be standing by the kitchen table, mixing eggs, butter 'n flour in that big bowl with the blue and yellow tulips, all the while humming the sweetest tunes. Then she'd start the slow, steady ceremony of sprinkling flour on her rolling pin and kneading the dough with her careful hands, the hands that knew just the right touch. Back when my head just reached the tabletop, I'd spend many mornings watching Grandma turn simple things into... magic. Oh, how the house would fill with the smell of goodness... and the feeling that everything's just right.

At Publix, our bakery bakes your favorites throughout the day, so the flavor and freshness are at their peak whenever you choose to come by. You'll recognize the same touch, the same care as Grandma's hands.

The Welfare Reform Mismatch by Hugh P. Price

In the first months of welfare reform, there has been a wave of euphoria about the sharp decline in the number of welfare recipient families. By 1996, nearly all states had passed or enacted reforms, and by 1998, 14 states had imposed a 6-month or longer time limit on welfare benefits. The removal of the benefit and its potential replacement, a women's ability to continue or further complicated by the irony of whether she or her protective measures.

October, The Little, Little Witch

The following is a story written by Kindergartner of Gelfand Elementary School, St. Petersburg. Pictures were illustrated by the student, Dr. A.S. Kadon and Mr. Bivona.

Once upon a time, there was a little, little witch. Her name was October. Little October knew thirty-one (31) magic tricks.

One of her favorite magic tricks was making herself change into a leaf. First, she would fly up to the top of a tree, sit patiently, then when a leaf began to fall, she would change to the color of that leaf and slowly tumble to the ground with it. She would change to red, yellow, orange, brown and sometimes green. She had so much fun trying to race with the leaves, as they danced to the music with band sounds of the wind blowing, dogs barking — and — struf — reu — wild wolves howling, a oo — oo — Owls fooewing when, whoo and sounds of squeaking steps. It was a fun-filled party!

They danced the tootsie-roll, the happy face belly dragon. He looked like a giant because he had grown taller! The big witches hollered—all together, "October, the little, little witch is big, big, big! How did that happen? Now she can fly with us!"

"Perky — you are right!!!"

The days began to get shorter and the nights began to get longer. Each time she got dressed in her tall cone shape black hat, and long black dress with a triangle-cut bottom all around. October mounted her little, little broom and flew magically in the air-rooms-azoms.

The party was in the haunted house-high up on Try to Get Up Mountain. October ar- rived at the party in three (3) weeks. The door was hanging off the hinges and was hardly closed. "Kadabra — kadabra!" In a black little trick of the eye, the creepy door opened at October's command! The white witches, the green and purple belly dragons, the one-tooth black wolves, the smiling Jack-ol-taran, the purple-blue moments with big feet, the happy face white ghosts, the mean- ing jet black cats, a bat mommery with golden tennis rackets didn't want her to get lost. On Halloween night, the big witches together for safety. The night got shorter and the nights were shorter and the nights had grown taller! The big witches hollered-all together, "October, the little little witch is big, big! How did that happen? Now she can fly with us!"

October was so excited and pleased with her new size.

She could not get home fast enough to look in the mirror. "Good night October!"

"Happy Halloween!!"

October zoomed home in the broom became long, longer when it heard the doorbell was barely closed. She made her broom pulled down at Perky! Perky — you are right!!!" They couldn't stop laughing and dancing to the music with band sounds of the wind blowing, dogs barking — and — struf — reu — wild wolves howling, a oo — oo — Owls fooewing when, whoo and sounds of squeaking steps. It was a fun-filled party!

"Happy Halloween!! Happy Halloween, everybody!"

They went outside to the broom parking lot. She made her broom longer-the short, short, short broom became long, long, long. When it heard the magic words, "Kadabra, kadabra!" October zoomed home in two (2) weeks. So, if you look up in the sky—Halloween night, you'll see a tall, tall witch riding on a long, long broom—smiling, as she passed across the brightly lit full moons.

Woo—waa-to! "October! October! October!"

"The little, little witch—now is now the tallest witch, riding with the big witches!"

Making is the best alternative to wearing masks. Parents can have fun applying makeup to complete their child’s transformation into a character, princess or whatever. Safety is also a priority for children.

Tampa is a great place to unmask.

Over the past few years, I have gained the reputation of being the worry wart in my social circle. My friends have come to expect that whenever I am in public, I will have a piece of paper with me to read aloud to them. My behavior, I admit that I ride them sometimes, but that is what true friends are for. It is just in my nature to entertain them in areas that I am educated or simply concerned, whether they are receptive to listen or not. I have always been a compassionate person with overwhelming concerns for humanity and our existence together. I don't see any reason why that should not continue. So after reading Parker J. Palmer's Meeting for Learning: Education in a Quaker Context, I was instantly moved to share the potential I saw in the concept.

"Meeting for Learning." My brain was exposed to Quaker images or essays such as Parker J. Palmer states, "one's total life must be brought along - not only intellect, but values, beliefs, actions and our existence together. I don't see any reason why that should not continue.

In commemoration of Red Ribbon Week, the Say No To Drugs campaign held a ceremony at the Martin Luther King Recreation Complex. The event ended off with the Say No To Drugs pledge: "I promise to lead a drug free life, and to help others to do the same to learn about the harmful effects of drugs, and to warn others about them, to encourage everyone I meet to lead a drug free life, and to keep this lives without drugs." The featured guest, Dr. Howard Porter, a drug rehab counselor and host of the TV show, Patmore in Healing, spoke about the troubles of mood altering drugs and alternative choices.

The Alliance provides resources to schools for the children who have a hard time connecting or who are considered hyperactive. It is because of the Alliance's base on networking and drug-free they are sponsored for community National Red Ribbon Week. The funding was local businesses and con-

African-American Women Marched Into A Movement Of Unity

PHILADELPHIA—In the spirit of their ancestors, six thousand African-American women from across the nation marched into a movement of unity. The historic Million Woman March along the Benjamin Franklin Parkway on Saturday, October 25, 1997, was a call to action.

"When I heard the drums, my heart sang," said Velvet Martin, a teacher and community activist from Minnesot, FL. "When I saw the stream filled with people, I knew I needed this. The thrust was to be in action and I'm glad I responded." The crowd was huge, thousands of them, spirited with names like the "Sisterhood of the Harriet Tubman," the "Betsy Shelton," and the "Winnie Mandela.

They came by cars, airplanes and subways. They came marching each other with bags,carrying banners, calls of "God Bless You," and the traditional Apache greeting, "As Saam Ahlinem, Wa Lakham Solon," or "Peace be upon you, and upon you be peace." Paper Chiners, the co-chairwoman who conceived the idea for this march along with fellow Philadelphia activist Ada Coe, were criticized for the manner in which they organized the march. Chinersu said they didn't want any insanity, any outside intervention. They were seeking to give voice to what it means to be black and female in America from the street level from this grassroots.

Christ Is The Answer Crusade At Elim

Bethel Community's General Missionary Society Anniversary

The General Missionary Society of Bethel Community Baptist Church will observe its annual anniversary on Sunday, November 23rd. Anniversary services will be in charge of the Rev. Calvin Hopkins. Local churches throughout the community have been invited to this joyous occasion as well as the general community.

The Rev. Calvin Hopkins, Pastor of Stewart from CME Church, and his congregation will be in charge of the services. The theme for the occasion is "The Church Where Everybody Is Somebody," and members invite the public to attend this meeting. Any volunteer is welcome to attend the meeting.
Children of the West and fixed programs and the newest analysis conducted by the St. Petersburg Times, which proved that black residents are three times more likely than white residents to be stopped and questioned by police, indicates that citizens are still concerned about civil rights being violated. Chief Davis explained that often times when police officers stop people in what is considered a high-crime area and police think that this individual may be involved in some type of criminal activity, this assumption is based on the implication of the "Stop and Frisk Law". The "Stop and Frisk Law", as it is referred to in West Publishing Company's "West Florida Criminal Laws and Rules", 1960 book states that whenever any law enforcement officer of the state encounters any person under circumstances in which they feel the individual may have committed, or is about to commit, a violation of the state laws of the officer's jurisdiction, it is his duty to order such person to be detained and ordered to produce identification. In the course of being detained, if probable cause for arrest is determined, then the person can be arrested. If, after further investigation, there is not enough evidence present to arrest the person, then they may be released.

In addition to concerns about police interaction with citizens, many question whether economic development will ever reach the inner-city. Mayor Fisher suggests that there has been tremendous energy in playing a role in identifying the problem and working with the community groups to resolve them. But just being at the negotiation table is not enough for some urban leaders.

"Before, we may not see any benefits, strong words of progress need to be played out," argues Grady Terrell Sr., of Terrell Industries. "But enough, we can speak about a new Atwater's or some other new business that has developed, based on the 'Stop and Frisk Law'."

Mayor Fischer agreed that at least one economic development in the African American community. Then maybe next year, at this time, we can bring about a new Atwater's or some other new business that has developed, based on some of the politicians' directives and promises that we've heard. Only then can we brag about progress. Now we can only be thankful for the peace." But there is peace throughout the weekend of the memorial activities for Tyron Lewis, which included a candlelight vigil on Oct. 25th at 7:30 p.m. at the location where the incident occurred and a march and rally for social justice and an end to police brutality on Oct. 26th that began at the site of the shooting and ended on the steps of City Hall. These activities were sponsored by the People's Democratic Uhuru Movement.

Lewis' mother, Pamela, expressed her gratitude to the crowd of over 2,500 people or the candlelight vigil, but she stated that the struggle for justice continues and it's one that will never go away.

NPDUM leader, Omali Sullivans, and other citizens attending the memorial service agreed that at least one good thing came out of this tragedy and that is that members of our diverse community and political representatives are talking and listening to each other.

Gwen Reese, a citizen who attended the vigil, said, "I'm filled with pride and gratitude. I'm filled with comfort, love and respect when interacting with making these types of decisions."

says Chief Davis. "I hope that when we're faced with making these types of decisions, we don't want to ever forget that tragedy."

involved have gone through a lot of stress. We don't want them to ever forget that tragedy."

Davis said, "This day represents a day of hope and a day of progress."

Before the show started, the reporter was granted an interview with Chief Davis about what this day represented to him.

"This day represents a day of anger to me," Davis said. "I know that Lewis' family and the police personnel involved are going through a lot of stress. We don't want to ever forget that tragedy will occur, but I hope that we'll remember this in the future when we're faced with making these types of decisions."

LOS ANGELES—Since his auspicious emergence in the 1980s, LL Cool J has catapulted from overnight overnight sensation to benefited cross- cultural phenomenon. A na­tional emcee at the ten­uer of age 28, his lengthy list of accomplishments in­cludes two-time Grammy Award winning rapper, star of a hit television series, feature film actor, musical adver­tising pitchman, author, com­pany chairman, humanitarian and devoted husband and father. Indeed, as LL enraged for­mently confidently into the next millennium, some fans may wonder: It's a reasonable enough question, one to which LL replies, "Why?" Still restless and hungry after 15 years in the spotlight, the rapper seems to elevate his game to even higher levels. "I haven't achieved everything I want, and if I definitely want to be more," the legend admits. "To be honest, I feel like I'm just getting started at the beginning again. There's a desire to improve what I've built thus far and make it better."

With his music and acting careers firmly on track, LL finds himself pinned on the precipice of multi­media success. His latest album entitled 'Mambo Zone' is an other­wise mysterious catalog of accessible rhythm and sub­lime dance. For his part, LL attributes his longevity to one single fact: "I've always been true to what I was feeling emotions­ally and artistically," he says. "I don't like violence. I've never seen violence, some people I know, but the violence in mov­ie and there's nothing cool about it. It's definitely not a part of my life."

LL has always made it a point to use his celebrity sta­tus to draw attention to orga­nizations that focus on and help young people in the country. The camp gives children who have never left the city a chance to experience the "real world" from the comfort of their homes. While some may find the idea of children being exposed to such dangers in their own homes, it allows them to get a glimpse of what the "real world" is truly like.

The program is designed to teach children about the dangers of violence and to discourage them from engaging in such behavior. It also aims to provide a safe environment for children to learn about themselves and their emotions. The program is designed to be accessible to children of all ages, and includes activities such as storytelling and music to engage the children in the learning process.

Clifton Davis Switches From Good To Evil In 'The Sentinel'

LOS ANGELES—Television audience favorite Clifton Davis, best known for his role in the popular NBC series ' Amen', perhaps the chillingly evil Actor/producer, star of 'Fool Me Twice', a special episode of Paramount Network's 'The Sentinel', says "It was challenging and I think to create a person who was so different from my­self." Davis says, "Everyone wants a dark side, being an actor, he is about all about being able to express the dark side and bring it to the surface."

To reach into the character­plane playing a role like Lonesome's demands, Davis draws upon his experiences living among young people in prison. "I don't have any qualms playing a character so inherently bad because, "Lonesome was easy to play in terms of moral questions; he was just desensitized to the world." Davis also enjoyed his role in "The Sentinel" because it allowed him to get back to his dramatic roots. A multi-talented per­former, Davis is also a Grammy nominated record­ing artist for the single, 'Never Can Say Goodbye'.
